

THE UNIVERSITY OF QUEENSLAND PRESENTS

FREE PUBLIC LECTURE

“THE END OF THE CITY?”

The report of my death was an exaggeration”

Professor Sir Peter Hall,

FBA, MAE, PhD, HonMRTI

Professor of Planning at the

Bartlett School of Architecture and Planning

University College London

Date: Monday 15 May 2006

Time: 12 noon for a 12:15 start

Location: Senate Room,
Level 5, Brian Wilson Chancellery
University of Queensland, St Lucia

Sir Peter Hall is a renowned authority on the economic, demographic, cultural and management issues that face cities around the globe. From 1991-94 he was Special Advisor on Strategic Planning to the UK Secretary of State for the Environment, and a member of the Deputy Prime Minister's Urban Task Force (1998-1999). He received the Founder's Medal of the Royal Geographical Society for distinction in research.

Do contemporary communications cumulatively undermine the city? Is there a kind of “urban glue” that holds cities together in the face of telecommuting, network communications and virtual workplaces?

Sir Peter will discuss the available evidence on what is happening across the developed world.
